CURE OF SCROFILOUS SORES.

"Trinity-street, Smethwick, near Birmingham,

"Mr. Clarke.—Sir,—My husband, I am glad to say, is quite cured, and is now able to attend to his business. His complaint was scrofulous sores; and he had been bed about eight years. He went to several doctors, and spent many pounds in trying different remedies, but still grew worse, and had kept his bed for the last two years, except a few hours at intervals. The discharge from the sores made him so weak, every one though him in a consuspation. We tried to get him in several institutions, but thoy would not admit him, as I believe they thought him past cure. The sores extended nearly all over his back and chest. It took one hour each day to dress the wounds, and the pain almost took his reason away. Nothing did him any good until we heard of your Blood Mixture. My husband is well knewn here; he is a house-agent and collector. The people are quite astonished, and it has induced many to try the Mixture. You are at liberty to make any use of this you please. Arcept our grateful thanks.—I am, very respectfully, "JANE MOWLAM."

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

STEANOR CARE.

YESTERDAY forencon, the City Coroner held, at his office in Hyde Park, an inquest respecting the cause of death of a man named William Gordon Evelyn, who was then lying dead at the Infirmary. A man named Blaikie was before the Court on suspicion of having caused the injuries which resulted in his death.

The following evidence was submitted to the jury:—Samuel Evelya deposed: I am a clerk in the Civil Service, and reside in Brougham-street; decessed was my brother; he was thirty years of age, and a native of Sydney; he was by occupation a clerk, and unmarriod; he occasionally drank to access.

Ellen Case deposed: I am a marriod woman, and reside on the South Head Hoad with my husband, who keeps Emerson's Family Hotel; I recognize decessed as being a man who was at my husband's place on the Ioth of the last month, being the Wednesday after Easter Sunday; it was between 3 and 4 o' clock in the afternoon that 1 first saw drecased; the man before the Court named Robert Finlay Blaikie was also there; decessed and Blaikie were under the influence of drink: Blaikie cance into the bar where Evelyn was, and called for drinks; there were two men with Blaikie at the timo; he saked for cards before the drinks, but she did not give them to him; two men were with him when he called for drinks; Blaikie and I had a discussion about my refusing to give seasis to them; he called for more drinks, but I declined to give them until the others were paid for; Evelyn was present all this time; Blaikie and on the New York of the nose; the rown has present all this time; Blaikie and on the New York of the nose; the rown have them? I call the time; Blaikie that he had called for the drinks; I had the nose, after his saying, "I did not eall for any drink;" I then told Blaikie that he had called for the rink; he said he did not, and he of the nose; the result was, that Kvelyn's nose blied a good deaf; he staggered, but did not faller is own or dealers the hirst low I observed he was bleeding from the nos sent, one of them prevented Blaikie from striking Evolyn a third time; my sister-m-taw Mary Cane was in the tiar at the time.

By jury: Deceased did not drink with Blaikie; he was not in his company; he paid for his own drinks; Blaikie I have never seen before, but I have often seen Evolyn at my husband's place; Blaikie called Evelyn a liar when he denied having called for the drinks; I cannot say whether they appeared to be acquisitinances or atrangers to each other.

By Blaikie (who was told by the Coroner he might question witness): I said that when I was in the kitchen, before I entered the bar, I beard high words, but I did not say between whom; I will not swear pestitively that it was you that called for the drinks; one of the men who was in your company paid me for the smallest of the two men who were with you, and ask him to have drinks with him; he might have asked him; I will swear deceased did not drink the drink you had in the bar; I swear you drank it yourself; there was, I believe, a man between you and deceased the first time you struck across the man; I did not hear deceased call you a liar, and grossly insult you, before yoo struck him; you only had one drink apiece in my pince; I was paid for three drinks; three more were called for, but I would not serve them till the first were paid for; they were paid for afterwards.

A juryman thought the questions put by Blaikie were quite irrelevant. He wished to hear about the striking of the blows.

Dr. Bedford: I cannot speak of the mere loss of bleed in itself being directly connected with the inflammation of the pleurs.

The Coroner: I will put my question in another form. Are you of opinion that the loss of bleed consequent on the injury to the near did not contribute in any way to the man's death?

Dr. Bedford: Not directly.

The Coroner: Did it do so in any way?

Dr. Bedford: Not directly.

Dr. Bedford: I don't exactly know how the man got the inflammation of the pleurs; he might have got it in many ways—perhaps by gotting out of his bod and walking about the ward at night; I do not think I could be justified in saying that the bleeding at the nose accelerated the man't death, or in giving my opinion as to the question of the person's (Blalkie's) criminality, for of course it affects that.

The Coroner: Of course it does.

SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1873.

Ir is the custom in South Australia and Victoria, as it is in England, for the newspapers to collect evidence with respect to the state of the crops, and to present it to the public for the guidance of dealers in grain, pending the appearance of the more elaborate and reliable official returns. These unofficial and reliable official returns. These unofficial returns are gathered from the farmers, men of reliability being selected to state what they consider the truth respecting their several districts. The utility of such statistics depends, of course, on their accuracy, and in this particular they may be treated with considerable respect; for, although the estimates are made when the crops are growing, and, consequently, at a time when the hues of expectation are apt to be imparted the hues of expectation are apt to be imparted to the ears as they wave in the sunlight, ex-perience proves that they are found to con-cur substantially with the official figures which cur substantially with the official figures which follow. They are generally in excess of what the Registrar records; but this excess is now so well known as to be allowed for. Much suspicion has attached to the whole community.

Had the Assembly postponed questions relating to the constitution of the Upper House, and applied itself to the consideration of the important mining matters involved in the claborate measure of the Government, a special report of the crops; but those who will be at the trouble to compare the unofficial with the official returns for a series of years, bearing in mind at the same time that even the official figures the same time that even the official figures present only an approximation to the truth, will perceive that the suspicion has no toundation whatever.

As an instance of this agreement, we may refer again to the statistics of the South Australiah harvest which have just appeared. The earliest rough estimates of the late crop of wheat laid the crop at fifteen bushels per acre. Then came the more elaborate newspaper returns, from which it was concluded that the average yield would be 12 bushels per acre, and on this the dealers went to work. The Government statist's returns, since published, show the average yield to be 113 lished, show the average yield to be 113 bushels per acre.

We enter into these particulars for the sake of pointing out, for future guidance, what reliance may be placed in the returns collected by the papers. These remarks enable us to attach due importance to the unofficial statistics of the harvest of Victoria, published by the Australasian last week. About 70 of the reports furnished by the correspondents of that journal refer to wheat. Of these, eight state the yield to be much above an average, twenty four give it an average position, seventeen say that the average is not stated. The returns from the unsettled areas are scarcely as favourable as unsettled areas are scarcely as favourable as these, and may therefore modify them. The area table shows four returns considerably above, ten slightly over, twenty-eight of average amount, seven slightly under, and twenty-one much under the average. With respect to these averages, the journal in question observes:—" In metropolitan mercantile circles an impression has With respect to these averages, the journal in question observes:—" In metropolitan mercantile circles an impression has been prevalent that the average yield of wheat for the colony would be quite twenty bushels, but of late the estimate (as in Adelaide) has been lowered somewhat, and from 17 upwards is now talked of. Assuming that the outlying newly settled areas have really done what they say, an average of 19 bushels might justly be looked for; but we are indisposed to place greater reliance on the early might justly be looked for; but we are in-disposed to place greater reliance on the early estimates from those districts than upon those of our old-established farmers, which have proved somewhat unreliable; we therefore prefer the mercantile estimate, and we may add that, after a careful study of our corres-tondents, reports we article to the correpondents' reports, we anticipate that our ex-ports of wheat, if any, will be on a very small scale." From this it appears that the Australasian discredits its own returns, if so it is not for us to give them more respect than they receive at Melbourne; at the same time the circumstance impairs in no way what we said about the general value of conclusions

we said about the general value of conclusions gained in a like manner.

Taking the mercantile estimate then, and putting it beside the area under wheat in 1872 (334,60% acres), it is made to appear that the surplus for export amounts to 1,832,952 bushels or thereabouts. Attention is, however, drawn to the fact that this year wheat-cropping has much declined, and there are at present no figures to show in what degree. If the mercantile estimate be overstated, as we consider most likely, and the area planted be diminished, it will, however, be quite soparent that the comments on the Victorian figures already quoted may be quite correct, in so far as they represent the amount of wheat for export as being very small. The settlement of the Bouth Australian average at 11½ bushels now shows that a clear balance is them left of 6,498,412 bushels of wheat, which, as the grain runs at least 60 lbs. to the bushels as the grain runs at least 60 lbs, to the bushe to represent about 175,000 tons for export— some 75,000 having already been shipped.

The returns, although somewhat disparaged

The returns, although somewhat disparaged in point of accuracy, present some subjects worthy of consideration. We observe as usual a vast difference between the maxima and the minima of wheat farming. Some men got six bushels and some forty. The great secrete—but it is a mistake to call that a secret which everybody knows,—appears to be that the soil will yield pretty much what a man asks for, only he must de his part towards the result. Here is a man in the midst of a poor worn-out district, where the general yield runs down to twelve bushels an acre, getting forty-four bushels an acre, getting forty-four bushels an acre by manuring forty-four bushels an acre by manuring his land with the refuse from a boiling-down establishment. Not a few attribute their success to careful and provident cultivation; and such avowals as these should not be lost Tunked. Of the Public Funcul accorded to the remains of the late Mr. W. C. Wentworth on TURSDAY next, the of the late Mr. W. C. Wentworth on TURSDAY next, the of the late Mr. W. C. Wentworth on TURSDAY next, the that leasen be applied to the land.

> No one can reasonably complain that the Par-liamentary session is closed, considering its length and the exigencies of the public ser-vice; but it is a matter of regret that two of the principal items of the Government pro-gramme yet remain to be effectively dealt with. The necessity for a reform of the land laws in relation to prateral and servell well actions to the The necessity for a reform of the land laws in relation to pastoral and agricultural settlement is not less argent than an amendment of the laws relating to mining. The Government were, perhaps, wise in selecting for legislation one branch only of the numerous interests attaching to the public lands; but they appear to have been somewhat unfortunate in their measure, and to have miscalculated their power to control the thought and attention of members within the limits of the area they desired to compass.

No Ministry has yet been able, by any re-presentation of public necessity, to restrain even their own supporters from being allured into the byways of debate, and thus consuming into the byways of debate, and thus consuming unprofitably time which ought to be devoted to the accomplishment of the settled plans of a political campaign. And, besides, the Mining Bill introduced under the suspices of the Government was a very bulky document, requiring much time to read and close attention to comprehend. It seems not to have requiring much time to read and close attention to comprehend. It seems not to have been fairly grappled with by the House, and it was probably agreeable both to the members of the Administration and to a majority of the other representatives of the people that the measure should, with the expiration of the session, die a natural death. If anything like the energy which was displayed in reference to some measures at the close of the session had been shown concerning the Mining Bill, it might have been recast in committee, and the law might have been made more satisfactory to the whole community.

Had the Assembly postponed questions

the time would have been much more profitably spent. It cannot now be urged that the bill to alter the constitution of the Legislative Council was necessary because the Council in its discretion had thought proper in a previous ression to reject a Government measure relating to Border Customs, because during the present session the Government have been able to carry through the same Unper House lating to Border Customs, because during the present session the Government have been able to carry through the same Upper House the Border Duties' Suspension Bill; and, as his EXCELENCY stated in his speech on the day of proregation, "they confidently rely on being enabled to conclude conventions with the Governments of Victoria and South Australia for securing for all practical purposes the free passage of the River Murray." It would be an insult to the Upper House to suppose that the action of the Assembly in regard to the Upper House Bill in any way influenced their conduct concerning the Border Customs Duties Bill. The more probable supposition is that, after having had time for reflection, those who formerly opposed it modified their opinions and resolved not to stand in the way of a measure endorsed by public opinion. Still the fact remains that a large portion of the time of the Assembly was taken up in discussing the principle and details of the Upper House Bill, and the Mining Bill was allowed to remain in abeyance. There is a lesson, however, the heavest of the larger than the content of the content of the care. to remain in abeyance. There is a lesson, however, to be learnt from all the circumstances of the case which ought not to be

Instead of the anticipated comprchensive and elaborate Act to amend the laws relating to mining, we have, as one of the results lating to mining, we have, as one of the results of the session, a statute of three clauses. It is not without its importance. The mining community may accept it as a small instalment, and hope that in the next session they may obtain a fuller resilization of their anticipations. The Act to amend the Crown Lands' Occupation Act of 1861 received the assent of the GOVERNOR on the last day of the session. It is one of those measures that resulted from the spasmodic energy which was displayed a short time prior to the prorogation. resulted from the spasmodic energy which was displayed a short time prior to the prorogation. It amenda the law relating to leases for mining "for any metal or mineral except gold." The 22nd clause of the Crown Lands' Occupation Act provides that "persons may, on application to the Minister, obtain authority in writing to select on Crown lands within twelve months. months from the date thereof coal or other mineral lots, and may take possession of such lots and hold them for the period mentioned in such authority," the right being reserved to determine the boundaries of such lots, and to determine the boundaries of such lots, and to make provision for the reservation of water supply. The second clause of the Amending Act just passed provides that notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Crown Lands' Occupation Act of 1861 (which is termed the "principal" Act) "every authority to select on Crown lands coal or other mineral lots issued under the provisions of the said Act shall have force and effect for two years from the date thereof unless sooner satisfied, and may be transferred at any time by the holder the date thereof unless sooner satisfied, and may be transferred at any time by the holder thereof on payment of a fee not exceeding twenty shillings for each block so transferred." Here are two important amendments—(1) That an authority to select shall hold good for two years instead of one; and (2), that it may be transferred on payment of a small fee.

that it may be transferred on payment of a small fee.

The third clause of the Amending Act provides that "in any case in which it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, that greater facilities for the working of adjoining mineral lots would be naured by the amalgamation of such ots, it shall be lawful for the Governor, with the said advice, to authorise such amalgamation upon the payment of a fee not exceeding twenty shillings for each block so to be amalgamated, and the provision in subsection (3) of the twenty-second section of the principal Act prescribing the expenditure to be section (a) of the twenty-second section of the principal Act prescribing the expenditure to be made on mineral lots shall apply to such lots when so amalgamated." The sub-section referred to provides that "lessees shall expend at the rate of five pounds sterling per acre on their lots within the first three years of the leans."

The advantage of these amendments will, no doubt, be fully appreciated. The reasons given by the Hon. Minister for Lands (Mr. FARKELL), on moving the second reading of the bill, will also commend themselves to the judgment of the public. He remarked that during the last eleven months about 400,000 scree of mineral land had been selected; that the Government could not possibly survey it within twelve months, and that, therefore, it would be unjust to keep the money of the selectors.

It appears that nearly all the selections are taken up in twenty-acre blocks, and no doubt there are numerous cases where, by amalgama-tion, a large waste of capital may be obviated.

An Uniucky Diogram.—In the latter end of March last, Theophilus Chamberlain arrived in Sydney from the diamond mines in Africa, bringing with him about £350 in gold coin. He reported the matter to the police, and the two women were apprehended, but nothing was found on them or in their house. The stair is in the heads of detective Camphin, whose tast and vigilance in such cases are too well-known to be further spoken of.

First and Narrow Escape.—At about a quarter to 3 o'clock on Sunday morning (the dynarroports) a fire occurred on the premises at 163, Stangsfiret, East Collingwood. The building was a two-storial brick one, with slate root, and used as a grocer's shap by Robert Langman. The shop was closed at about a quarter past 12, and the family, consisting of Langman, his win, and two children, were in bed at about 1 o'clock, the best room being in the upper back room over the kitchen. Langman was last in the slop, and turned off the gast the burners, but not at the motor, as it was not customy to do so. The loss of the smile of royalty to the young ladies who

Very quickly he took measures for ranchying the evil, and as the plan is at once ocheap, involves very little trouble, and is quite effective, we will describe it. A square wooden box or trough, about 2 feet by 4 feet, is let into the ground, and rute that all the drainage of the entablishment passes. The box is divided into two equal spaces by perforated from. An iron vessel, like an oil drain (a kerosene tin would answer), containing a salution of chloride of time and abum, is placed with a little spice to as to allow its contents to dribble into the time of the content of the trough there is a perforated sheet o time at the bottom on which is a layer of sand, while a showed and charcoal or wood ashes floats on the top. A PEW DAYS AT ROME.

Wx left Naples on the 11th of January, and, after a railway journey of eight hours' duration, arrived in the evening at the terminus at Rome, and were taken thence in a close carriage to spartments propared for us in the Hosel of Europe. The night air, so we came towards the city, had turned rather cold, and we were therefore well pleased to find our rooms warmed with wand fires and in other respects made the city, and turned rather over, and we were therefore well pleased to find own rooms warmed with wood firea, and in other respects made thoroughly confortable. Our trujet from Napher had been an agreeable one, for the railway ruus through a heautiful country, nearly all mountain secuery, with villages lying on the slopes, and nestled in the valleys. Frequently (as the train sampt onward) we had seen one either side of us monastic-looking buildings on the hill-tops, with grape-vines trained in various fashions, and different kinds of first trees. As the sun, however, set early, our dioranna of the country did not fast very long. But as we approached Rome the full moon was shining brightly, and we thus saw numerous ruins of ancient walls and viaducts. Our drive from the station to the Hotel, in the Piazza d'Espagna, took us through several squares and a few narrow streets. We saw no more that evening, for after our journey we were quite ready for retreshment and sleep.

On the following day (Sunday) we attended the

and siercy.

On the following day (Sunday) we attended the English Charch—just outside the Porto del Popolo—and found the room well filled with English visitors. The service was conducted by four ciergymen, seemingly of the "High Augheau" school. This church is situated in the upper story of a large building, and is, as I believe, outside the Holy City, in deference to some old Roman prejudice. There are several other churchs for Protestant worship, and some of these are now within the walls. We had a walk on the Pincian Hill, and in the Borghese Gardens before our evening service.

On the 13th we began our sight-seeing at Rome, regarding which I feel my descriptive powers must fail, and that it would be presumptuous for ne to attempt a theme so often and so aby discussed. I shall therefore do little more than tell you where we went and what we saw, knowing that you can readily obtain ample details in whatever you may take an ospecial interest by referring to your library shelves. We went first, of course, to the Vatican and St. Petera. St. Petera is, indeed, a wonderful place, the grandeur and beauty of the interior especially not having been sufficiently described in any book that I evar saw. Our guide conducted us to all the chaples, into the nave, and down into the crypt (below the Tabernacle), whorein, in a "casket of gold," it is said, in half the salves of St. Peter and of St. Paul. In the right transept of the cathedral is the chamber wherean the late Council was held; the large screen dividing it from the main church not being yet removed. We saw also, in each transept, altranse of the development of the Large value of the large liftis, and yet bears striking traces of the glory of ancient Rome.

We went also, as a matter of course, to the Colossium, that suppendous pile of building which has been so frequently and so elaborately described. It is difficult to realise, much less to attempt to convey an idea of the greatness of this structure, in which 87,000 could once be confortably accommodated as spectators. First, we were conducted under the massive arches into the centre of the arena, round which shripes are erected and small chapels to the memory of Christian martyrs, and where semmons are preached on Fridays by Capuchin priests. Then we ascended the stairs from gallery to gallery, until we reached the topmost tier for the apectators. Here we looked, from a giddy height, down upon the minimized forms of people walking in the arena below, and thus gained a full impression of the greatness of the far famed Colosseum. In viewing this striking spot, once drenched with the blood of Christian martyrs, the well known lines of Byron irresistibly impress themselves upon the mind.

Our next visit was to the Therma, or Baths of Caracalla, another grand ruin standing a little further to the north-east of the city. In this was

Our next visit was to the Therma, or Baths of Caracalla, another grand ruin standing a little further to the north-east of the city. In this wast atructure, in ancient times, 1600 bathers could be accommodated at once. But all that is a thing of the past. We could not but regret that the modern Romans do not appreciate, as did their ancestors, the landable luxury of cleantiness. No provision is now made in Rome for bathing, as of old, when these Thermse were in use. At our botel (notwithstanding the plentiful supply of water to the city), five francs was found by us to be the price of a grand bath, which, after all, consists only of an ordinary sponge-bath two feet in diameter, with an inch in depth of water. The cameriera looks surprised when such a thing is asked for, so little cared for in Modern Rome. The Thermse of Caracalla is a fine ruin with many spacious compariment; the Caliclarium, or hot bath; the Tepidarium, or warm bath; and the Frigidarium, or cold bath. The walls show unmistakable signs of former magnificence. We see everywhere pieces of marble and cornices; and large chambers, with vaulted roofs on which colours and parts of designs have yet remain. Some of the pavements are still in a good state of preservation, presenting patterns which we recognise as having been frequently copied for common use by moderns. The large mosaics silently re-

Numerous statues have from time to time been found within these rains, and some still remain; but the most celebrated have been removed—amongst which (in the Museum at Naples) are the Farnese liuli, the Flora, and the Hercules. Fragments of sculpture and of architecture will here, doubtless, continue to be discovered and used as models for the student in art. A short distance outside the noble ruin, we were shown exeavations which revealed the remains of very old houses, tar below the level of the foundations of the Thermae. The gande sand that these were offices connected with the Baths. They appeared to be buildings occasi with the habitations of Pompeii—as the colours and drescoes resembled those on the walls of the exhaused city.

On our way to the Catacomba, we stopped to see certain Columbaria, in which were the resting places of many a Roman in the old heathen times. Entering a square building (capped with a samil dome), we descended a narrow flight of steps, and all around the sepalebral space below we saw hundreds of mehas containing the ashes of Romans, stored up there for many centures. Their names, agos, and conditions of life are recorded on small tablets, or steles, above each orche; and in very many places you may read the names of husbands, wives, and whole families. The castodian pointed out to us many names of notice families of whom there are spirit-stirring records in Roman History. Fragments of monumental stones and tembs are here for sale, for such persons as are fond of antiquities.

A snort drive from the Columbaria brought us to the entrance of the catacombs of St. Schattan. Here, with the custodian, we descended a short light of steps; and then, with lighted tapers, we passed on through passages of from about two feat and a half to three feet wide. On both sides are openings, or shelves, in which the remains of early Christians were deposited; and, in many instances, the slars and fragments of marbie macribed with the names of the long departed are yet to be seen. We saw here—in what is considered to be the most frequented portion of the "Catacombs," popularly so called—the curious pannings which are amongst the most unteresting remains of ancient Christian ark. Our Lord, represented as the Good Stephed; a head of Christ, city as damp and unpleasant as we had expected, but were, nevertheless, not sorry when we eventually emerged from the gloom into the glorious sunshme.

Our next vasit was to the celebrated church of but were, nevertheless, not sorry when we eventually emerged from the gloom into the glorious sumshine.

Our next visit was to the celebrated church of San Faolo, about twelve miles to the south of the city. This magnificent church, destroyed for the most part by fire in the year 1823, was rebuilt by the piresent lope, and has been often described. It is, without doubt, one of the most remarkable churches in or near Rome. Externally, it does not strike the eye as very beautiful, but the interior is grand in its decorations, paintings, and musaics, We visited also the church of the Tre Fontane, or Three Fountains; respecting which we heard another curious old legend. Here it is said that St. Paul's is a place—marked by a chapel—where the two great Apostles (Peter and Paul) are said to have taken their last leave of each other. We purchased photographs of the French monks who have charge of the building, and so returned after a pleasant drive to our hotel.

On the 15th of January we called upon Mr. Charles Sumner, formerly of Melbourne—the sculptor of the Bearke and Wills momannent in that city. A letter to him was given to me by a Sydney friend. In Mr. Sumner's studio we saw, amongst other of his works, a very good bust of the late Mr. James Macarthur, of Cainden, and busts of Mr. Archibald Michie and the Duke of Edinburgh. The two latter were in an unfinished state, but are good likonesses. There are several ideal works of Mr. Sumner's, said by judges to be of very considerable merit. Mr. Sumner would be willing to undertake the statue of Captain Cook for Hyde Park, Sydney; and I think that the statue might well be placed in his hands.

We visited next the mosaic studie of the Vatican, where many people were found by us copying celebrated pictures for churches. We also paid a visit to the Museum of Status (reput d to be the finest in the world), and saw original chefs d'cauere long familiar to us by means of casts and engravings. Whilst looking at this unrivalled collection, we could not but think of poor Mr. D tion of harms of marriages, &c. We then devoted some considerable time to seeing the art treasures of the Museum of the Capitol, and amongst them a statue of the Dying Gladiator, the right arm of which is a skilful restoration by Michael Angelo. We spent the remainder of the afternoon at the Palace of the Cesars, on the Palactine. In this ruinous heap excavations are constantly going on, and valuable discoveries are frequently made. From an elevated part of it we saw the Tarpeian Rock, the Roman Forum, and other traditional localities. All around us we saw the grand remains of the Imperial City, whose name has filled the whole world—its arches, its temples, and its ruins, telling of past greatness and present decay.

The Duke of Genoa. — The Italian war steamer Garibaldi arrived a few days ago in Hobson's Bay, having on board the nephew of the King of Italy, the Duke of Genoa. A public landing was accorded to his Royal Highness on Monday, of which the Argus gives the following account: —H. B. H. the Duke of Genoa landed from the Italian war steamer Garibaldi, and was received at the town pier Sandridge, in the midst of a heavy shower of rain, by his Excellency the Governor. The weather was stermy and boisterous from an early hour in the morning, and only held up for a short time at midday. The stage at the landing-place was washed every few minutes by the waves, stirred up by a strong south-west wind. The same honour was paid to his Rayal Highmess, as representative of a foreign court, as would be paid to a member of the Royal Family of the United Kingdom. The Garrison Artillery Corps, 85 strong, under Landing-place with the Royal Highmess had quitted his ship. The barge of the Garibaldi was towed to the shore by the steam launch of the Nelson. His Excellency the Governor appeared on the ground in good time, accompanied by the Treasurer (Mr. Langton) and Major Pitt, A.D.C. The Chief Steeretary (Mr. Francis) arrived a little later. A holy of police, under inspector Burton, attended to maintain a clear passage from the landing-place to the shore end of the pier, but, on account of the showery weather, there were very few persons indeed for the police to control. When the barge came alongside his Excellency walled down to the wet stage, shook hands with the Dake, and conducted him and his party to the carriages. The Garrison Artillery presented arras, and the Sandrian, and Sandro Lieutreant Cantello, sud Midshipsean Benarcord. The party drove straight of to two, second square the lock of the police under inspector Burton. His Royal Highness was lint taken to the Treasury, and then to the Melbourne Club.

A fierce assault has been made on our railway management in one of the Melbourne journals, on the strength of some statistics lately issued from the Registrar-General's Office. In 1865 there were 264 miles of railway in the colony, 140 carriages, and 1,066,177 passengers, and the receipts from the passenger traffic alone amounted to £223,099. In 1871, there were 315 miles of railway, 144 carriages, and 1,387,552 passengers, and the receipts from the passenger traffic only smoonted to £216,867. Thus, in spite of the additional miles of railway, and the largely increased number of passenger traffic were £6000 less in 1871 than they were in 1865. But the goods traffic yields the greatest return to the revenue, and that is made the chief ground of assault. There has been an addition of 400 trucks to the goods-traffic department (nearly 36 per cent of the whole number in 1865), with an increase of 22 per cent. only to the revenue. This is attributed to the dilatoriness with which goods are forwarded by rail, leading in many cases to bullock-drays being brought into competition with the different lines. In some cases goods have been known to be at stations more than a fortnight for want of trucks to bring them to town, whilst empty trucks required for some other purpose have been passing by them daily. This, on the face of it, would seem to require only to be made known to the Commissioner of Railway, in order to ensure a removal of such a ground of complaint. It is calculated that the lines are fully equal to double the amount of their present business. Having first attended to the wants of the public, it is suggested that there is much that might be done for the Government in bringing down from the up-country stations ballast, timber, and stone. To effect any great improvement in the traffic arrangements a first-class man is wanted at the head of that branch, and this want has been felt and this want has been felt for a long time past.

Two heifers, one and two years old, bred out of Mr. Richard Martin's Derrimut stock, have been sold for £1250, and the same breeder has also sold one of his fifteen months old bulls for £700. This is eminently satisfactory, showing, as it does, how stock may be improved and raised in public estimation when the breeders conduct their business in a spirit of intelligent enterprise. Higher prices than that which Mr. Martin chtained for his young ba. have often been realised before, but that for his have often been realised before, but that for his have often been realised before, but that for his have often been realised before, but that for his have often so guite unprecedented. All were purchased, in Sydney, whither we are constantly seeding young antimals of high pedigree and undeniable quality.

The German immigrant ship Alardus, which put in here the other day without her captain, and in a very neglected condition, has been thoroughly cleanaed and funnigated, and has now been allowed to leave the quarantine ground and come up to Hobson's Bay to refit and take in provisions. Nothing more is known of the captain, ban that he was last seen on the poop of the ven when within a few days sail of Melbourne, and that he is believed to have gone overboard, whether have accident or designedly no one can tell. It was supposed that the passengers, who are on abore at the quarantine station, would have been relieved in a week or ten days, and that the A'ardus would then have proceeded to Brissage with them, but fresh cases of varicolia, or chicken-pox having broke out among them will necessatate a further detention. The immigrants by this vessel are generally of the poorer class of German Seandinavi, was and Danes, but there are exceptions to this, some holding to their credit seels sums as show that they must have lefs much comfort behind them when embarking. One of these persons has $700 in the hands of Mr. Brahe, the consul, which he brings out to provide a new home for his family. The Queensland authorities are necessarily indignant at what has taken place with regard to the ship, and telegraph here to that effect. But however much the ship may have been neglected, there does not seem to have been any neglect in the selection of the immigrants. They are all of the right class, and no immigration regulations ever yet framed can provide against a captain becoming deranged and throwing lismself overboard.

Such an unprecedented occurrence as the arrival here, within six days, of ten cargoes of general merchandise, representing an aggregate value of over half a million stering, could hardly have taken place at a more inopportune period. Large stocks were on hand previously, trade was dull, and the demand light, with prospects of being less during the winter. This state of things is not encouraging to regular importers, but it was only what might have been anticipated from the telegraphic advices of large shipments being made from England to Australia. Breadstuffs are steady; trade sales of flour at £13 10s. to £14 10s. No sales of wheat reported; millers well supplied, and more to re-ceive on account of contracts made in the early part of the season. Groceries and oilmen's stores in excessive supply, and difficult to quit at cost. There is a fair trade inquiry for kerosene at 2s. 6d., duty paid; other oils dull of sale. In liquors there is not much doing. The value of bulk and bottled beer has been affected by recent heavy arrivals. Dark brandy in wood has been offered at 5s. 9d., and the only sale of case we heard of was the line of 500 cases Associated Vineyard mentioned yesterday. Other spirits unchanged. Metals are quiet, holders not forcing sales. An improvement in rice has been occasioned by a movement in the Victorian market. The Brewster's cargo, before reported as for Sydney, has been placed there at a very full figure. Holders of sugars are looking for advanced rates. TO THE EDITOR OF THE REBAID.

Sth.—I read, with some interest and amusement, a letter in your issue of to-day, hended as above, but I consider all such letters as useless as waste paper.

There is scarcely a family in the colony who have not, or do not at this moment satiler from the scarcity of family servants, and this scarcity is daily, any, hourly, increasing; and although there is an institution now in existence in Sydney which will in a few short years permanently sat and overcome this great want, yet housekeepers, particularly ladies, wealthy, independent, and supposed to be littliggent, at the head of large establishments, and who are the greatest sufferers by this scarcity, are the stupids who maint, or rather will not see how their interest lisin this matter; but they probably profer submitting to pressi disconficir rather than subscribe of few chillings to exage hom it—I allude to the Fernale Training School for Densette Scivants at Upper Dowling-styeet, Darlinghurst.

Yours obediently,

A PERSISTENT IMPOSITION.—Notwithstanding the repeated exposure of the false presence of certain unprincipled persons, they still practise their impactions on a credulous public—we allude to dealers in initations on a credulous public—we allude to dealers in initations of the Wheeler and Walson's sewing-machines. It is universally admitted that no Sowing-machine has approached the silent working WHEELER and WILSON, in rapidity of action, firmness and elasticity of stitch, perfect adaptation to every kind of work, easiness of comprehension to the learner, simplicity of construction, and amazing durability.
